Dublin, July 30.
The capital of the Irish Free State is on the eve of a gigantic strike. In addition to a strike of printers and compositors which leaves the capital without newspapers, the tramway and bus operators declared that they would stop work as from August 1. Laundry operators intend to follow suit. Railwaymen refuse to forward any more copies of English newspapers supplied before the strike.

Enterprising newspaper vendors are lending the papers to prospective readers for two and threepence an hour. Transport Workers' Union thereupon barred the forwarding of English newspapers in Dublin and the provinces.

SILVER JUBILEE

Celebrations On Local Basis

A communique issued by the Colonial Secretary last evening states that a telegram to the following effect has been received from the Secretary of State for the Colonies:—

"The King has been graciously pleased to approve a recommendation of the Prime Minister that the 25th anniversary of His Majesty's accession to the Throne, which falls on Monday the 8th of May, 1859, should be recognised in a fitting manner and the Government are making the necessary arrangements. The title Silver Jubilee has, with His Majesty's approval, been officially adopted for the year."

It is His Majesty's desire that the celebrations should be on a local basis and that His Majesty's subjects should, wherever practicable, have the opportunity of observing the occasion in their homes. It is His Majesty's express wish that the celebrations should be as simple as possible and that all undue expenditure should be avoided.

Official Celebrations

Official celebrations in London will extend over the period May 6th to May 25th. Accession Day, Monday 6th May, will be a Bank Holiday and a Public Holiday throughout the United Kingdom. Celebrations will be inaugurated on that day by a thanksgiving service at St. Paul's Cathedral, which will be attended by Their Majesties The King and Queen and members of the Royal Family. Services of a similar character will be held throughout the country, either on that day or on the Sunday following, May 12th.

A programme in outline of such celebrations as will take place in London has been drawn up by the Government. It has been submitted to The King and has received His Majesty's approval. Details will be published at a later date.

IDEAL GARAGES OF THE FUTURE

During the past few years many changes have taken place in the design of house, and all our big cities and towns are very rapidly expanding. A great deal of thought has been given to the design of houses, to equipment, and to labour-saving devices, but very few builders seem to have given much consideration to the garages.

In the early days the car was housed in the coach-house; then cars became cheaper, motoring was no longer the pastime of the wealthy, and people with smaller houses became motorists. Their homes had no coach-houses, and cars were housed in "portable garages," sometimes even in a very rough shed.

Houses in some towns, however, are built so close together that there is no room for even a shed to take an Austin Seven, and so, at intervals along the roads of our towns, old houses with their orchards and gardens have given way to rows and rows of "lock-up" garages, or the communal garages, with its pumps and service station, repairs, greasing and washing for the middle-class man who has not a chauffeur. But, gradually, builders are realising that a garage is not only desirable but a necessity if their houses are to be sold. Unfortunately, most builders are conservative people, and the progress is very slow.

Of the nine wonder, flat-roofed "Houses of To-morrow" at the 1934 "Daily Mail" Ideal Home Exhibition, only three had garages, and two of these were additions. They could have been taken away from the house and the design would have remained unaffected. "Houses of To-morrow" of £1,500-£1,500 with no garage!

Therefore, to the builders who had the forethought to realise the importance of the garage, and to include one in their house of to-morrow, much credit is due. These builders are E. and L. Berg, of New Malden, Surrey. On could not take away the garage from their "Sunspan" house; it was part of the design.

This garage was designed by a motorist for a motorist, and contains many labour-saving features. The garage door is roughly at right-angles to the front door. This is not for effect, but has a reason, for by this means the canopy from the bay of the kitchen can be continued over the front door to the garage, so that the owner can drive straight up to his garage, and, if the door is closed, can get out of his car protected from the rain or snow by the canopy and the lee of his car. Passengers can alight, too, under cover and protection.

Sliding Door

The door of the garage is sliding, so that the car can be driven right up to it and it can still be opened. Also, it is more labour-saving than the ordinary type, as it does not need pegging back to prevent it blowing about in the wind. It is hung on wheels and can be opened by a child. E. Hill Adams and Co., Ltd., Britannic Works, Haslemere Avenue, London, S.W.18, are the makers. The garage is heated by pipes running from the central heating boiler; thus, even in the depth of winter, there is no danger of cracked cylinder blocks. But that is not all. Mr. Berg, as a motorist, realises the importance of the careful "warming-up" of the engine, and of the damage caused by congealed oil. With these pipes heating the garage the engine is always warm and can be used safely for a fairly quick, short run to the post or shops. Also, it will start easily in any weather, and the battery can be reserved in winter for the head lights, instead of expending all its reserves first thing in the morning.

At the rear of the garage, extending from the roof to the top of the garage back doors, which are just high enough to allow the car to pass through, is a large storing cupboard for tyres and suit-cases.

"Travelling trunks," says Mr. Berg, "belong to the car, and should be kept in the garage in a clean cupboard, protected from the dust and damp, and not in the loft."

These doors at the back are plain swinging ones, and the top bolts are of the spring-catch type with a chain, so that even the shortest person can release them. They allow the car to run right through to the concrete wash, situated at the rear of the garage. An important point is that if two cars are kept the garage can be extended at any time with very little extra cost.

No Fumes

The garage has no communicating door to the hall of the house, as experience has shown that fumes from the car are noticeable in the house during hot weather if this door is fitted. No work bench is supplied as standard, again as the result of experience, as it is found that the ordinary householder relies on the service station for repairs.

There are three electric lights. One is under the porch, which also serves the front door, one in the garage, and one overlooking the wash.

So much for the "villager of to-morrow," but what of the town resident? He will, so the architects tell us, live in a block of flats. The recently completed flats at Richmond Hill Court, just outside Richmond Park, Surrey, are amongst the most modern with regard to the garage accommodation. The building is shaped round three sides of a square, with Richmond Terrace as the fourth side, and the centre is laid out as ornamental gardens, with a hard tennis court for the exclusive use of residents. Beneath the tennis court is the semi-underground garage in the charge of a manager and mechanics, where not only petrol and oil supplies may be obtained but all service repairs carried out. The windows to the garage are concealed in the side of the ornamental garden, and do not detract at all from the beauty of the gardens, yet at the same time they are large enough to light the garage for all ordinary purposes.

An Hangar As Well

Looking further into the future, an American architect, George Fred Kerk, designed a house for the Chicago World's Fair which not only had the garage as part of the general scheme but also possessed a hangar for an aeroplane. This house is a "light-house" type of structure, being round, with the staircase in the centre. The sketches show how the accommodation was arranged.

Obviously, the days of the converted shed or coach-house are numbered, but the average builder seems to be very slow to realise the fact.—B.E.A.

Knee Action Liars

When four wheel brakes were introduced some years ago an obstinate automobile manufacturer persistently ridiculed the idea that four wheel brakes desirable. This short sighted manufacturer spent thousands of dollars in newspapers and magazines advertising the fact that his company would not adopt the equipment until it was "perfected."

In due course of time the manufacturer "perfected" a four wheel brake. It lasted exactly a year and was the most miserable makeshift ever devised for an automobile. Meanwhile a small coterie of unscrupulous dealers, guided by none too scrupulous factory representatives, fabricated stories of serious accidents which were happening to cars equipped with four wheel brakes of more conventional design.

Naturally, Abraham Lincoln's famous advice about fooling some of the people some of the time came into play; with the result that the obstinate manufacturer, despite the convincing "facts" of his propaganda, experienced an ignominious defeat at the hands of the American public.

Recurrence of this type of despicable propaganda is now taking place in connection with knee action front wheel suspension. Insidious rumours concerning failure of knee action mechanisms are now going the rounds on every automobile row. No car equipped with this 1934 feature is exempt from the calumny, that is broadcast by rogues which drip with competitive venom.

What are the facts?

MOTOR JOTTINGS

AUTOCAR ROAD TESTS

Crossley Ten Torquay Saloon

There is undoubtedly a market for a small car at a rather higher than average price which will give a good performance, that possesses features of refinement in detail of a kind associated with the more expensive medium-sized and larger cars, and at the same time provides a considerable degree of comfort.

From its introduction a year or two ago the Crossley Ten was intended to meet these requirements and as experience of the earlier examples showed, and trial of the latest Torquay model saloon has had the effect of emphasising, it does so very well indeed.

This particular car was fitted with a preselector gear box, which is available as an option at an increased price. It can be said right from the commencement that from the performance point of view this type of gear box is thoroughly and completely justified on the car concerned. The well-known advantages of a preselector gear, namely, the rapidity and certainty of changing afford, quite apart from the simplicity, help materially towards an all-round gain in performance on a small car in particular.

This is especially the case on the Crossley Ten, for it has a very willing, notably smooth-running engine which will go up to quite high revolutions without fuss, and therefore give good maxima on the indirect gears for anyone who cares to use them, so that through this form of gear change the very best can be made in an easy fashion of the engine's performance capabilities.

It is a car which, for its size, and carrying a roomy four-seater saloon body, gets along exceptionally well; a full load seems to make little or no difference to it, and it required it will hold as much as 55 m.p.h. easily and well; whilst at 40 to 45 m.p.h. the engine is most pleasingly smooth running, and is scarcely audible. The car does not speed in too marked a manner up normal gradients and the longer kind of gradient which is just a little too steep for speed to be maintained on top gear can be taken very satisfactorily on third, on which the limit is a speedometer reading of 60, representing a genuine 58 m.p.h., with about 54 as a comfortable maximum. This is a high figure for the type and size of car, which does not profess to be a sports model. Also, on second gear 35 m.p.h. is possible, and on first gear just over 20, and with these useful limits not only can the driver suit the gear ratio to the hill which is being tackled, so keeping up the speed when required, but also a very useful getaway from a standstill, and after speed has been reduced for obstructions and other traffic, is possible, aided greatly, of course, by the preselector change.

The particular self-change box used is not noisy on the indirect ratios, and is pleasingly quiet with the engine ticking over in neutral. It is noticeable that the drive takes up softly when the pedal is released after changing gear, giving actually a slight delay effect, almost as though there were an ordinary clutch between engine and gear box to soften the action, though in point of fact

Careful checks have been made with eye-witnesses, highway patrolmen and garages to learn the true facts. To date there is not one scintilla of evidence to substantiate the allegation that "any type" of knee action design, or the steering mechanism connected with this design, has even remotely contributed to an accident.

The whole source of these mythical catastrophes seems to spring from misguided salesmen (possibly they are downright malicious) whose cars are not equipped with knee action. The pinch of competition, so deadly to weak men, seems to stir up a bile that can only vent itself by knocking a competitor.

Every indication points to the conclusion that knee action rumours are by products of sore-headedness, bull-headedness and out and out liars.

there is not. The preselector lever is quite conveniently placed, and has a stop to prevent reverse being engaged unintentionally.

It is an engine which has scarcely a vibration tremor throughout its range, and even on the gears there is not a buzzing or harsh effect, as might be expected, when the throttle is kept down to make good use of the quite high speeds possible on them. A timed run with the wind following was made at 61-64 m.p.h., the speedometer then registering 56.

As a result of these combined qualities it is a small car on which a good average can be put up, for it handles well, too; the steering does not require conscious effort and is light, the car is very reasonably steady on corners, even at speeds rather higher than most people use, and a very important point, it rides well without any pronounced fore-and-aft pitching, such movement as there is over surfaces which are not perfect being mostly soft.

Again, the brakes are powerful, reducing speed or making a quick stop in a way which promotes confidence, the action being that with light pressure on the pedal ordinary deceleration is given, and then towards the end of the pedal travel the brakes come on really powerfully.

As to general points, the seats have air cushions which are very comfortable without being too soft, and which are of generous depth. The front seats are mounted on Leveroil-adjustments; they give good support to the shoulders, and the back seat has a centre folding armrest. Leg room is good for both front and back seats.

Interior finish is very nicely carried out, with polished walnut woodwork; there is a sliding roof, and the windows in the doors wind up and down with a lighter action than is usual. Safety glass is fitted all round. The wind-screen can be opened out wide; it has an electric wiper with a single blade. Handles that are useful in closing the doors from inside are formed in the woodwork, and are not separate additions, as usual, and there is a stout chromium plated "assist handle" for the front passenger.

Instrument board cubby holes of a useful depth are provided, a clock, and a fuel gauge which was found to read accurately are included, there are pockets in the forward doors, two ash trays are fitted in the front compartment and two in the back. A net spring-spoked steering wheel is used.

In the tail of the body is a useful sized luggage container and the spare wheel tyre has a neat metal cover.

The engine seems very reasonably accessible for ordinary routine attention. There is a complete fuse system guarding the separate circuits, and the tools are carried under the bonnet.

bees was taking place from the hive. We could only enshroud it in a rug and then proceed to don veils and gloves for our drive home. Several of the rustics who met us as we slowly went along almost did a dive into the ditch. They thought we were some new secret society going about our dastardly work. I must say we felt rather foolish, hot and bothered ourselves, and for days afterwards I discovered solitary bees climbing up and down the upholstery of the car, and even up my trouser leg. I sincerely hope my neighbour will not want any more bee carrying done for a very long time indeed.

Life's Darkest Moment

One of the turns in the entertainment at the annual dinner of a famous London firm was provided by a conjurer. For one of his tricks he asked for the assistance of some one from the audience.

A man went up, and while the audience waited for the conjurer to continue the trick, some one in the front row called, "All Don't you make 'im disappear. 'E's our treasurer!"

AN INCIDENT OF SUMMER

Transporting A Colony of Bees By Car

Anyone who has carried a full colony of bees in a car will know the difficulties and excitement which accompany such a tricky business. It requires nerves of steel and a considerable amount of good temper to bring the job to a successful conclusion.

So when my neighbour, who had acquired "bee fever" in early summer, asked me if I would help him to fetch a colony from a place some twelve miles away it required a great deal of forbearance not to say him nay.

In the first place we arrived there too early, for the bees would not go into their domicile while the sun was so nice. So, after waiting about a bit, we set to with gauze and tinctures to cover the entrance. The first bang with a hammer set whole crowd in a fury, and those that were outside started to be so aggressive that I am sure my friend would have liked to drop the project there and then.

In the midst of what seemed like all the bees in the world we tied up the hive and commenced the perilous journey to the car, followed by angry legions, apparently very much questioning what we were doing with the happy home.

After tripping over a few rabbit-holes and such-like we got to the car and heaved in the hive. Fortunately it was a big car, but so hot was the work that we retreated for some refreshment before commencing the homeward run.

On arriving back at the car we saw to our horror that a miniature swarm was buzzing about therein and a slight leakage of

THERMOSTATIC CARBURETTER CONTROL

For some time there has been a tendency to make the driving of a car as automatic as possible. For example, transmission systems have been devised to operate automatically, clutches also have been operated automatically, and so have radiator shutters, the ignition control, and even shock absorbers, the degree of automaticity varying somewhat according to the nature of the mechanism, and the means adopted for operating it. For 1935 it is obvious that some degree of automatic control is to be introduced into carburetters.

During the last few years the R.A.G. carburetter has become firmly established by reason of the smooth running, rapid acceleration, and high power output which it makes available, and two new models have recently been introduced to give exceptionally easy starting, with, at the same time, no danger that a thoughtless driver may run with a closed choke and so flood the engine liquid petrol, thus causing crank case dilution and accelerating bearing and cylinder wear.

One model is known as the R.A.G. Thermostatic Jet, and it follows the well-known principles of the R.A.G. carburetter, but has in addition, a choke placed on the engine side of the main jet, whereas the ordinary band-operated choke of the standard carburetter is on the external side of the main jet. Moreover, this choke, which is very simple in form, consisting merely of a vertical slide, is arranged to be operated by a very neat and compact thermostat giving a very definite action. At each end of the top edge of this vertical slide, there is a small projection with which the sliding throttle plunger of the carburetter comes in contact, the result being that when the engine is cold the slide, being in its uppermost position, holds the throttle plunger slightly open and restricts the path of the mixture issuing from the main jet. In fact, the mixture has to pass up and over the choke slide, and in so doing it becomes highly vaporised, ensuring easy starting.

As the engine warms up, and, therefore, the cooling water also becomes warm, the thermostat comes into action and first of all withdraws a sliding plunger which allows the choke to descend sufficiently to close the throttle to the normal idling position. Further rise of the water temperature results in the continued action of the thermostat causing the sliding choke plate to descend until it is completely withdrawn. Should the car be left unattended for a short time there is very little loss of heat of the cooling water, and, therefore, the variable choke is not brought into action, so that on starting again the carburetter does not provide a needlessly rich mixture. This is an important point, for should the temperature of the exhaust system be utilised to control the action of the carburetter, the reverse is the case, for the exhaust system rapidly cools down, and, therefore, the carburetter would give a rich mixture until the exhaust system becomes heated again.

The action of this automatically controlled instrument is very definite, and it undoubtedly results in the carburetter delivering a mixture which is suited to the temperature conditions of the engine, while a careless driver cannot over-choke the engine. A very similar model, known as the Leverstart Jet, but without the automatic control of the sliding choke plate, is also being produced for those owners who do not care to have the automatic control, or who may find it difficult to adapt the automatic control to an existing engine owing to the lack of space for housing the bulb of the thermostat. With this model a whistling noise reminds the driver to open the choke. The price of both models is, however, the same, £6. Each are due to Mr. M. C. Morris, who invented the original R.A.G. carburetter, but it should be stated that the manufacturers, R.A.G. Ltd., 121, Victoria Street, S.W.1, are also continuing the production of the popular model without these refinements at £3.

FINALS DAY AT HENLEY

Leander Wir The Grand

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, July 11.
Henley of 1934 will long live in the memory of all rowing men, not only as the year of the drought, when the Thames was at its lowest level for many many years, but also as the year of perfect weather. Seldom has the regatta been held under more ideal conditions, for the sun shone gloriously from an almost cloudless sky on all four days. Except for a slight head breeze on the opening day, the wind has generally been in favour of the crews, and under abnormal conditions it was not surprising to find several of the previous "records" for the course broken.

The first day's racing was not very interesting from a spectators' point of view, for there were too many runaway victories; but on the other days there were many close and interesting finishes, with a number of surprises.

The greatest of these was undoubtedly the defeat of London Rowing Club, the holders of the Grand Challenge Cup, by Leander Club. Few people, even the Leander Club, expected this, especially as the Leander crew only got going again last Monday, after having had two days' enforced rest owing to their stroke, W. G. R. M. Laurie, tearing the muscles of his back. He rowed his races on Thursday, Friday, and again yesterday, with his back strapped up, and showed great pluck in doing so. London's defeat, however, still needs a lot of explaining away, for they were actually clear of Leander at Fawley, the half-way mark, and in the history of the Regatta very few "Grand" crews who have been clear at Fawley have failed to win. In this race, London established a new "record" to Fawley, and then Leander broke the full course "record" by no less than six seconds, covering the course in 6 min. 45 sec. On Friday, when rowing against Thames, Leander did even better, as they completed the course in 6 min. 44 sec. Their eight is composed of four Oxford (J. M. Couchman, J. H. Lascelles, A. V. Sutcliffe, and P. Hogg), and three Cambridge (K. M. Payne, D. J. Wilson, and W. G. R. M. Laurie). Blues, together with the Third Trinity oarsman, J. H. C. Powell. Under the careful coaching of Mr. P. Hogg, Thomas the crew has made astonishing progress, and Mr. Thomas has certainly enhanced his reputation as a coach.

Pembroke Fade Out

Pembroke College, Cambridge, from whom great things were expected with their four Blues as the backbone of their crew, failed rather dismally when opposed by Princeton University of America. The Cambridge crew led for over half of the course, but their effort appeared to take too much out of them, for when Princeton spurred along the enclosure, Pembroke were unable to reply, and simply faded out.

Yesterday's final was thus an English-American one for the first time since the war.

The Thames Cup final was an all-Pulney affair between London and Thames. In fact, all four clubs in the semi-final were situated within 100 yards of each other. Westminster Bank lost their semi-final against Thames in the first quarter-minute for A. W. Chester, who was rowing at No. 5 came off his side and caused the whole crew to lurch violently. Before they could recover, Thames had gained a lead of a length, and the Bank could never make up this leeway. Their mishap shook their confidence and they failed to row in their usual form.

In the other semi-final London, who have come on amazingly since their defeat at Marlow a fortnight ago, were too good for Imperial College. They were clear of them at Fawley and were content to hang on to this lead to the end.

The final was another thrilling duel between the two chief Metropolitan crews, London and Thames. It was anybody's race until the Enclosure was reached, for although Thames had left for three-quarters of a mile, a fine spurt by London brought them on terms, and the crews were level at the bottom of the enclosure. Thames then spurred up to 42, and won a great race by a third of a length. They owed a great deal to the stroking of H. G. E. Watts. Few people who saw the two crews race at Marlow a fortnight ago, thought that they would fight out the final at Henley. Reading Rowing Club are one of the oldest competitors at Henley, and therefore it was surprising to find that their success in the Wyfold Cup was their initial victory at Henley. They thoroughly deserved their success, which should be of immense advantage to the club, who only a few years ago could hardly raise a crew of any description. They steered splendidly in their races and defeated Royal Chester by one and three-quarter lengths. The brothers Bigland who were in the Chester crew, had not fully recovered from their efforts in the Goblets in the morning.

In 1903, L. Klaus and A. Ehrenberg, of Berlin, took the Silver Goblets to Germany; the only time they have been out of the country. Their feat has now been equalled by H. Barun and H. G. Moller, of the Wilking Club, who won the trophy yesterday by defeating the brothers E. F. and T. S. Bigland of Royal Chester. They were a very strong pair, but I think that they would not have stayed the course against a good English pair.

A Beautiful Sculler

The second German success was secured by H. Buhtz, of Berliner Ruder Club, who as was generally expected, won the Diamond Sculls. He thus repeated his victory of two years ago, and he set up a new record for the event by becoming the first foreign competitor to win the Sculls twice. Buhtz is a beautiful sculler, and a worthy holder. He also established a new course "record" of 7 min. 50 sec. to Fawley—beating by five seconds the figures set up by W. D. Kinnear in 1911. He equalled F. S. Kelly's record of 8 min. 10 sec.

Yesterday Rutherford was practically left standing at the start, for at the top of Temple Island, Buhtz was three lengths ahead and he outpaced the American throughout. There was a magnificent race in the final of the Ladies' Plate in which Jesus College, Cambridge, met Trinity College, Dublin, the Cambridge crew eventually winning by three feet, after some of the best stroking seen at the Regatta. Jesus are notably slow starters and therefore it was no surprise when the Dublin crew, who are certainly the best Irish crew for many years, led them from the start. Trinity College established a new "record" by getting to Fawley in 3 min. 18 sec, three seconds faster than Pembroke College in 1921. Trinity were then leading by half a length, but Jesus had then got into their stride and were gaining slowly. They continued to creep up and drew level near the Mile Post. Along the Enclosure the crews were rowing stroke for stroke, but Jesus just forced the nose of their boat in front to win a magnificent race by three feet in the "record" time of 6 min. 48 sec, which was seven seconds better than the previous "record." Jesus last won the trophy in 1931, and they have therefore profited by their withdrawal from the Grand Challenge Cup.

The Stewards' Cup was retained by Pembroke College, Cambridge, under dramatic circumstances, for in the final against London Rowing Club, E. G. L. Howitt, the London stroke, "caught a crab" near Remenham Farm. London were leading at the time by a short distance, but the "crab" was of such a nature that Howitt was shot into the river, and the London crew came to a standstill. Pembroke then rowed the rest of the course alone, and, under the circumstances, their feat in establishing fresh records, both for the half and full course, was amazing. They broke the Fawley "record" by three seconds, and the full course "record" by the same margin.

In the only Oxford v. Cambridge battle of the day, First Trinity, Cambridge, gained a rather unexpected victory over University College, Oxford, in the Visitors' Cup final. The Oxonians undoubtedly lost this race by bad steering, and also by the fact that they were rowing against their rudder for more than half of the course, due to the fact that Currie was pulling Hughes round. University lost half a length in the final minute owing to steering too close to the booms, at this was their falling throughout. They made a very plucky spurt along the Enclosure, and only just failed to draw level.

BRITON'S TOKIO ADVENTURE

Story Of Suffering In Prison

(Special Air-Mail Service)

London, July 11.
Mr. William Max Bickerton, the young New Zealand teacher of English at the High School, Tokio, who was arrested in Japan last March for "harbouring dangerous thoughts," has arrived in London after escaping from Tokio while on bail. He is a son of the late Prof. A. W. Bickerton, of Canterbury College, Christ Church, New Zealand.

Yesterday, interviewed by the writer, Mr. Bickerton made grave allegations as to his treatment at the hands of the Japanese police authorities.

He stated, among other things, that he had been submitted to a long process of "third degree," including a number of brutal beatings in order to extort a "confession."

"I was arrested on March 13," said Mr. Bickerton, "after the police had found an anti-Government newspaper in my house. For six weeks I was kept in police cells and in Toyotama prison, Tokio, without any charge being made against me."

"For the first two days I was kept under almost continuous 'third-degree,' which included incessant questioning by two detectives and a series of brutal beatings with a baseball bat. They demanded to know who had sent me the newspaper. I did not know and could not tell them. When I told them this they beat me again. The beatings were so severe that internal bleeding was set up in my legs."

HERDED WITH CRIMINALS.
"I was herded in cells with criminals, madmen, and 'drunks,' and was persistently refused permission to see the British Consul. My disappearance was, however, naturally noticed by friends, and on March 23 the Consul was allowed to see me."

"I complained to him, in front of the detectives who had beaten and 'third degree' me. They denied the beatings and commenced threats over again when the Consul had left. This time they added the allegation that I had given money to the Communist party of Japan."

"After six weeks of imprisonment, during which I had to subsist on bread and jam, and a portion of soup which the Consul managed to send to me, I was brought before a judge."

"The police produced my bank pass-book, showing that I had withdrawn some money, as evidence that I had given money to the Communist party. The judge waved this 'evidence' to one side and fixed the trial for June 30."

"By this time I was thoroughly broken in health and decided to escape. On the day, the liner Empress of Japan sailed for Vancouver, I walked openly on board and mixed with the passengers. Perhaps the police were glad to let me go, hoping thus to avoid diplomatic complications. However that may be, I went free and unmolested."

"A question, regarding Mr. Bickerton's arrest and treatment in prison was asked in the House of Commons in April, when Sir John Simon, the Foreign Secretary, stated that the British Ambassador and the British Consul were closely following the case, and were doing all they could to protect Mr. Bickerton's interests. It is understood that a further question is to be asked shortly."

ADMIRAL'S ILLNESS

Unusual Accident To Sir Dudley Pound

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, July 11.
Vice-Admiral Sir Dudley Pound, the Second Sea Lord, who is seriously ill in a London hospital following an unusual accident, is progressing favourably.

Sir Dudley was having a tooth extracted when a loose tooth was dislodged, and an X-ray examination showed that it was in one of the lungs. An operation failed to remove it.

Sir Dudley, who is fifty-six, has been Second Sea Lord and Chief of Naval Personnel at the Admiralty since 1932. At Jutland he was in command of H.M.S. Colossus, and before his appointment in 1927 as a Lord Commissioner of the Admiralty, he was for two years Chief of Staff to Admiral of the Fleet Sir Roger Keyes. He was Rear-Admiral commanding the Battle Cruiser Squadron from 1922 to 1931.

MEIJI BASEBALL TEAM

Spectators Impressed at Baseball Practice

Shanghai, July 25.

Meiji University's baseball team worked out at Hongkew Park yesterday, and, judging by the form shown, soon after a rough crossing from Japan, local baseball will have a tough task in the series which begins at 4.30 o'clock this afternoon, when the visitors meet the Japanese All-Stars. The Meiji squad ran through only a light work-out, but it was enough to convince the large crowd of on-lookers, mostly Japanese, that the team has real class. The visitors appear to be somewhat heavier sticklers than Shanghai has come to expect in Japanese teams, while they flashed the same scintillating fielding which always is an outstanding feature of visiting Japanese nine.

While Meiji are virtually a 100-1 shot to beat the local Japanese this afternoon, the contest is likely to be far from walk-over. The All-Stars will be comprised principally of members of the Nagai Watai-Kisha team, who twice this year have defeated the Shanghai Amateurs and have been playing the best brand of ball shown by any squad ever to represent the local cotton mill.

LONDON WEDDING

Diamond Ring For Chinese Bride

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, July 11.
There was a wedding at the Chinese Legation in Portlandplace on Saturday with a flower-laden table as the altar.

The bride was Miss Bessie Yieh Chung Li, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Li Ming. Her bridegroom was Dr. Sze Ming Sze, late house-physician at St. Thomas's Hospital, whose father is Chinese Minister to the United States.

Dr. Sze is shortly going out to a practice in Shanghai.

The ceremony was performed by the Chinese Minister in London, Mr. Quo Tai-chi.

The wedding began with the Chinese National Anthem. It lasted about an hour. Afterwards there was a reception in an adjoining room, which lasted another two hours.

The marriage certificate was read aloud, and then sealed with red tape by the bridegroom, the bride, and their witnesses.

The wedding ring was a circlet of diamonds—not a plain gold ring.

The bride wore almond blossom pink satin and a veil of tulle draped into four wing-like loops.

Weak Teeth

are usually due to a lack of Calcium (lime) in the body

For Women

Kalzana is of the greatest value in regulating the bodily functions. Any lack of calcium results in pain and prostration, but these are quickly relieved as soon as the shortage is made good. By taking Kalzana, the scientifically approved calcium treatment, you can avoid pain and discomfort. By restoring the balance of calcium in a natural way, Kalzana must do you good, and cannot possibly be harmful.

Remember that your teeth are living parts of your body. The food they require is Kalzana, the calcium food. If your teeth get too little calcium, they become weak and liable to decay.

Such teeth are a constant cause of pain and trouble and never look healthy.

Start taking Kalzana and notice how quickly your teeth become strong and white. By taking Kalzana, pain and trouble are prevented, decay is arrested and your teeth permanently strengthened.

Make your teeth strong and white with KALZANA

Weak and difficult Children are often so because of a lack of calcium in the body. Rapid growth demands a great deal of calcium to form strong bones and healthy tissues. When kept short of calcium, children become nervous and moody, and difficult to manage.

Children

"A listless difficult Child" is a child whose constitution is out of order," writes a famous physician.

After having examined a great many difficult children, he writes: "I could prove that the blood of many so-called 'difficult' children was poor in Calcium."

Children take

Kalzana Tablets like sweets, a sure sign that their system is in urgent need of it.

In Diarrhoea—

Kalzana hastens the healing of the ulcerated and inflamed areas and soothes the nerves. With Kalzana the diarrhoea will very quickly stop.

"By the use of 6 Kalzana tablets daily the Diarrhoea (in two severe cases) was stopped in an amazingly short time," writes Dr. ZUNTZ, the world famous Physician.

Lack of Calcium

in the body causes many different complaints. Regain your health by taking

KALZANA

The Calcium Food

At all Chemists

Made by the manufacturers of Sonatogen & Formanin

Before Baby comes

The expectant mother should be careful to remember that she must supply all the calcium needed to form her baby's bones and tissues. Kalzana gives all the extra calcium needed, and corrects any shortage in the mother's diet. It protects the mother against loss of hair, decay of the teeth, vomiting, general weakness and debility, whilst it also ensures her baby against any predisposition to rickets.

Preserve your own health, and safeguard your baby's by taking Kalzana in good time.

(Use it during the last six months of your pregnancy)

Note

Only in the scientific form of Kalzana—a combination of calcium-lactate and sodium-lactate—are you sure that the calcium will be absorbed and retained by the body. Ordinary calcium administrations are often useless—it must be Kalzana.

Characteristic signs of lack of calcium in the body are:

- ✓ Eczema
- ✓ Night sweats
- ✓ Inflammation of the Skin, caused through unhealthy blood.
- ✓ Nettlerash
- ✓ Colds of long duration
- ✓ Bleeding of the Nose and other forms of excessive bleeding.
- ✓ Loss of Hair
- ✓ Tooth decay

These complaints show that your body is suffering from a lack of calcium. Kalzana will conquer your complaint by removing its cause (lack of calcium).

The opinion of well-known medical papers about KALZANA!

"The Pharmaceutical Journal of New Zealand," Jan. 1930.

"Kalzana has been used with very good results in cases of calcium deficiency, such as bone diseases, dental caries, rickets, weakness in growing children, during pregnancy and lactation—in fact, in all cases where 'a diet with an excessive calcium content' is necessary."

Rickets too are a typical sign of a lack of calcium. Kalzana will set all that right, and very soon your child will be happy and healthy again.

"The British Journal of Tuberculosis," April 1929:

"We have employed Kalzana with such advantage in the management of delicate children. It seems to be of considerable service in cases of rickets and other morbid conditions of bone and also as a preventive of dental caries. For pregnant women Kalzana is often beneficial."

"HE GOT SO ANGRY"

Why The King
Gave Up Golf

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, July 15.
The Prince of Wales recalled the days when he "caddied" for the King, in the course of a racy speech at the annual dinner of the Lucifer Golfing Society, of which he is captain, at the Savoy Hotel last night. Addressing the gathering as "Brother Lucifers," he said:

"The King played golf many years back, and I can remember the time when I used to carry his clubs. (Laughter and cheers.)

"I think he played quite a good game, and I asked him the other day why he did not go on with it, because I feel that golf is a game one goes on playing for a long time. But what he said to me was that 'he got so damned angry.' (Loud laughter.)

"The other member of my family who is a keen golfer, the Prince went on, 'is the Duke of York, my brother who as you know, has been quite sick with a bad hand. I went to see him this evening and he is getting very much better. (Cheers.)

"So many things are expected of the captain of an important club like this, I am afraid I have not been able to find the time to do the work, perhaps, that I was expected to do. But, anyway, I have reduced the number of speeches here to-night." (Laughter.)

Referring to this year's winner of the Empire trophy, Mr. E. A. Parker, the Prince said:

"I have not met Mr. Parker yet, but he apparently has been a great tennis player in his time. Braid (who sat next to the Prince) and I have been looking down the handicaps this evening, and we both think he is pretty hot at 18. (Loud laughter.)

"As captain, I made a suggestion that we might have some of the 'old timers' here to-night, and we are delighted to have Braid and Taylor and Herd. We are only sorry that Harry Vardon could not be with us."

The Prince's Handicap
"Talking about handicaps and Braid, last year when I entered for the Parliamentary, as I was teeing off Braid came up and said: 'What is your handicap?' I said: 'My handicap is 13.'"

"He looked rather wistful, and I said: 'Yes, Sunningdale, under the new par handicap system.' He said: 'We haven't heard about that yet here, but we will know about it next week.' (Laughter.)

"In I went 11 handicap, and got into the final—(cheers)—but I did not win."

The Prince added they were delighted to have with them Sidney Brews. If it had not been for Cotton's fireworks, maybe he would have won the Open. (Hear, hear.)

"Talking about Cotton," the Prince went on, "I did hear that MacDonald Smith was practicing putting, and he heard of Cotton's 65 in his first or second round—I forget which."

"He stopped practicing and said: 'I know I have got to practice holing my brassie shots now.' (Laughter.)

"Brew's performance was a magnificent one," went on the

"LET'S FALL IN LOVE"

And Some Snappy
Songs

Songland's two outstanding personalities, Harold Arlen and Ted Koehler, writers of "Stormy Weather," "Minnie the Moocher," "I've Got a Right to Sing the Blues," and a dozen other popular successes, wrote the music for "Let's Fall in Love," Columbia's musical romance, showing on Wednesday at the King's Theatre.

Responsible for the music in several editions of Earl Carroll's "Vanities," official creators of songs for Harlem's famous "Cotton Club," for the "Silver Slipper," the "Nine-Fifteen Revue," Arlen and Koehler, after but four years together, boast a long string of successes. Among them are "Sweet and Hot," "You Gave Me Everything but Love," "Get Happy," "I Got the World On a String," "Happy As the Day is Long," "I Love a Parade," "Kickin' the Gong Around," and many more.

Arlen and Koehler have written three songs for "Let's Fall in Love." They are "Let's Fall in Love," "Nice is Love Anywhere," and "This is Only the Beginning." These catchy melodies were created to go with the book written by Herbert Fields, son of Lew Fields of Weber and Fields fame.

Arlen and Koehler are a happy combination. Koehler, the elder of the two, is a whimsical, red-headed, humorous fellow with fifteen years of song writing to his credit, including many hits of the past, such as "Dreamy Melody," "Venetian Moon," "When Lights are Low," "Baby," "Oh Where Can You Be," "Wrap Your Troubles in Dreams," and others.

Arlen, who is barely twenty-six, is the composer of the combination. He is the son of a well-known Jewish cantor. Arlen was a member of his father's synagogue choir for many years. He is definitely a spiritual, creative personality. His melodies have a nostalgic yearning, a deep, palliative quality.

Arlen's mother wanted him to be a piano teacher, but Arlen had a great passion for music. After conducting an orchestra for a time, he went into Vincent Youmans' "Great Day" as a singer. One day, while drumming, the piano Arlen worked out the melody of "Get Happy" from the "Dance Rhythm" used by the "Great Day" chorus.

Through Harry Warren, composer, Arlen met Koehler, then a well-known figure in the song-writing business. Koehler liked the tune, composed the words, and the combination was destined to turn out some of the most popular "hits of the day."

Their music in "Let's Fall in Love" is sung by Ann Sothern, musical comedy star. She plays the leading feminine role in support of Edmund Lowe. Others in the cast are Miriam Jordan and Gregory Ratoff.

WOMEN IN THE CIVIL SERVICE

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, July 11.
Mr. Duff Cooper, Financial Secretary to the Treasury, replied in the House of Commons yesterday to Captain Sir Ian Fraser, who asked if he would give an assurance that the report of the Committee which had recommended that women should be given a fair field and no favour in the Civil Service would not prejudice the fulfilment of undertakings given to ex-Service men that they would have preference in appointment and promotion in the Service.

He said there was no undertaking that ex-Service men, as such, would be given preference in the matter of promotion in the Civil Service. The criterion of promotion was merit.

There would, however, be no departure from the undertaking to give preference to ex-Service men in the matter of employment in the Civil Service.

Prince, who recalled playing with him in 1925 at a country club.

"We are always very glad to see foreigners," he continued, "and the way this great game has developed in foreign countries. We feel that in Great Britain we taught the world to play golf."

"America has carried off our Open Trophy eleven years running, and we have seen some wonderful golf from other countries. We are very proud that this year both the winner and runner-up were British."

JAYNET GAYNOR IN CHINA

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, July 11.
Egypt's best-known stars are Dietrich, Garbo and Lillian Harvey. The Balkans demand fighting and action, writes a correspondent. China does not care about stars, with one exception—Janet Gaynor. In Japan action, war, animal pictures, and slapstick comedy go best, because they do not need so many superimposed titles.

I quote these "not very vital statistics for what they are worth: They may be supplemented with a reminder that British pictures are gaining ground in the Dominions to an extent that is causing Hollywood serious concern.

"Was there no water?" asked a listener.

"Sure, but it was no time to be thinking of cleanliness, replied the Irishman.

GLORIA SWANSON'S DIVORCE SUIT

Husband's Plans

(Special Air-Mail Service)

London, July 11.
Miss Gloria Swanson's husband, Mr. Michael Farmer, who is staying in Bombay until Thursday, when he will sail for Europe and thence for Hollywood, states that he knows nothing about the divorce suit filed against him except what he has read in the newspapers. Miss Swanson, he says, has not called him about it.

"She is now under contract for her latest picture, 'Three Weeks,'" he said, "and I intend seeing her on my arrival in Hollywood."

"I hope to start film production myself, and this experience will be useful."

Miss Swanson's attorney filed on her behalf a suit for divorce against Mr. Farmer, who is her fourth husband, last May. She alleges mental cruelty.

THE ENGLISHMAN ABROAD

(Special Air Mail Service)

London July 11.
"When the rules of the game prove unsuitable for victory the gentlemen of England change the rules of the game."

Who said this yesterday, asks a correspondent.

An angry Senator from the Middle West?

A rabid Indian Nationalist?

No. The words are those of a professor of London University, lecturing before the Communist Academy in Moscow.

Admitting that he could hold out no immediate hopes of a revolution, in England, Professor Laski was fairly sanguine about the prospects of the Empire, disintegrating.

Patriotism is, I admit, horribly unfashionable.

But it does seem to me that Professor Laski's methods of fanning his own nest for the benefit of foreigners leave something to be desired.

Ham-Powell film, "Man-of-The-World" and has remained ever since. Since his arrival, less than two years ago, he has been one of the busiest players in the film capital.

"The Dark Horse," "Central Park," "Taxi," "The Crooner," "Two Seconds," "High Pressure," "42nd Street," "Rain" and "The Gold Digger of 1933" are some of his many successful pictures.

In "Lady For A Day," Kibbee is seen as one of the dozens of Broadway night life, in a picture-ization of Damon Runyon's popular story. Others in the cast of this, highly entertaining film are Warren, William, Glenda, Farrell, May Robson, Jean, Parker, Ned Sparks and Nat Pendleton. Frank Capra directed the picture.

"LADY FOR A DAY"

Guy Kibbee's
Career

Alcohol has been the cause of many men's downfall, but in the case of Guy Kibbee, popular film actor, it started him on a successful theatrical career. (It was another man's drinking not his own).

The bald, rotund, jovial comedian, whose latest screen appearance is in the Columbia picture, "Lady For A Day," showing to-day at the King's Theatre, was born in El Paso, Texas. He refused to become interested in his father's newspaper business and when his brother formed a stock company Kibbee joined him as property boy.

While the show was in Chicago, the leading man went on a spree and couldn't appear on the stage that night. Kibbee, then a lad of 16, was pressed into service as his substitute, and acquitted himself ably enough. The audience didn't know the difference.

That was the beginning of a stage career that continued uninterrupted for years. Oddly enough it was not until a quarter of a century had elapsed that he set foot on a Broadway stage. For years he had tramped in the larger metropolitan centres in the country, but somehow New York seemed to evade him. Then, when he had given up hope of ever playing on Broadway, he received a hurried offer to appear in the Broadway production of "Torch Song."

Kibbee's stay in New York was comparatively brief, however. Motion picture men were attracted by his splendid performances, and soon he was on his way to Hollywood.

He was brought out on a two week contract, to play in a Wil-

43—Faction Fights In Hong Kong

There have been lately some occurrences which the Press of the Colony has neglected its duty in not reporting. For instance there have been several raids or fued fights accompanied by the loss of life—there has been a murder or two besides—and at least one house has fallen down owing to the late rains, killing all, we believe, its inmates.

Regarding the riots we cannot obtain sufficient information to enable us to furnish our readers with a succinct intelligible account. The native reports we gave a few days back were extremely lopsided affairs, although they indicated the corners in which a little truth might be gathered. The trick of enlisting the police was successfully practised by both sides of the faction, so that neither deserves the smallest sympathy. This clever trick was thus managed by the Tongkoon men. Several of the most reputable looking of their number went to lodge a complaint at the police station against the Sunon men, a strong party of police were immediately ordered to accompany the complainants to the scene of the strife. On the way, stragglers from the complainants party, joined the Police, until by the time the latter reached their destination, several hundred, had accumulated. Whilst the police were considering a moment what to do, these Chinese who had joined them fell upon the Sunon men, who of course had subsided into a state of apathy upon the approach of the Police, and who naturally were taken by surprise at this sudden onslaught, under the very eyes of the Police. The latter however were, not such fools as the Tongkoonites thought, for several of the assailants were arrested, prosecuted and ultimately punished.

We do not know how the Sunoners managed to turn the tables, but from the information in the hands of the police, the Tongkoonites appear to have been the aggressors throughout, for with every pains to arrive at the bottom of the difficulty, we believe no arrests have been made of Sunon men.

MURDER IN A
TEMPLEMan And Woman
In BookCRIMINAL SESSIONS
PROCEEDINGS

Sam Sang, a former market gardener of Kowloon, Tong and Wong Ying pleaded not guilty at the Criminal Sessions yesterday when charged with the murder of one Chu Kwai.

The case was taken by His Honour Mr. A.D.A. MacGregor. Mr. H. C. Macnamara, instructed by Mr. F. E. Nash of Messrs. Woo and Nash appeared to defend Lam Sang and Mr. Leo D'Almada Castro, junior, instructed by Mr. J. B. Prentiss, of Hastings & Co. appeared for the woman defendant, Mr. J. A. Fraser, Assistant Attorney General, instructed by Mr. W. J. Lockhart Smith appeared for the Crown.

Mr. Fraser opening the case said Wong Ying was the widow of the murdered man who was an earth cooler at Kowloon Tong at the same time that the male accused was a market gardener there. About February the two accused disappeared from Kowloon Tong and sometime at the end of March they were found living together in the New Territories near the village of Sap Pat Heung. There was a temple there called the Nam Hang Temple a little-used place since the happening of some tragic event which had made the villagers dislike worshipping there. The scene of the crime was about an hour from Un Long, the market place on the Castle Peak Road.

On April 5, Chu Kwai was seen at Un Loong in poor circumstances and he borrowed some money from a friend on the plea that he was looking for his wife. On May 18 he was at Cheung To Po Village, a short distance from accused's residence and field.

Early that morning a Chinese doctor saw Chu Kwai and the two accused meet on the road and heard the former exclaim: "Oh, I have been looking for you for several months!" Lam Sang continued on his way but the woman stopped to wash her sandals and listened to Chu Kwai. Then she got up and walked away into field, followed by her upbraiding husband.

The next link in the chain of evidence was supplied by a man employed by the same doctor as a collector of herbs. He saw the husband and wife enter the temple where they were soon joined by Lam Sang. After about a half hour, Lam Sang and the woman came out and looked about them after which Lam Sang went off in the direction of his home, returning later with some cloth. He took these in to the woman and soon both re-appeared from the temple, the woman washed some clothes in a stream and the man went back to his field.

Body Found

About 5 o'clock the same day, continued Mr. Fraser, two boys who were attempting cows nearby, wandered into the temple and saw the dead body of Chu Kwai. His head had been split open by a heavy instrument and his jacket hung from the door.

Sergeant Moran was first called for the Crown. He deposed as to police photographs taken of the scene and said the dead man was lying in a large pool of blood.

Pang Yau, a 70-years-old Chinese, blind and partially deaf, said the two accused had lodged with him. They were in and out of the day of the killing.

Evidence corroborative of Counsel's opening statement was given by Cheung Kwai, Cheung Sang-mai the Chinese doctor, and Kan Koon-mui, the herb collector.

Crown Objection. Mr. D'Almada applied for a copy of the statements previously made by witnesses the production of which was objected to by the Crown.

Mr. Fraser said he wished to help the defence in cases where such statements were later found to be contradictory, but he should be allowed to use his own discretion. He objected to the general principle that the defence should always demand these statements.

His Lordship said if the objection was on the doctrine of privilege, he felt that it could not be sustained in view of a recent ruling on the point.

Mr. Fraser asked to prepare copies of the statement for the defence.

The Statements. In the course of the evidence during the afternoon a Police in-

CYCLIST CAUTIONED

Harry Ho, 21 was charged before Mr. Lee at Kowloon Magistrate's yesterday with failing to drive his bicycle with due care and caution. Sergeant Kennedy said defendant was riding his bicycle along Sai Yung Cho Street at 8.30 p.m. on Saturday when the complainant, a 61-year old woman, ran out from a verandah and collided with the bicycle. It was raining hard at the time and a number of people were rushing about, and it was impossible for defendant to have avoided her. He was going at five or six miles an hour, which the police thought was a reasonable speed.

The woman was sent to hospital, but was discharged after treatment. She was not seriously hurt.

His Worship—it was not defendant's fault, then? Sergeant Kennedy—No, your Worship. If it had been a motor car, complainant would have walked into it just the same. Defendant was discharged.

PRIVATE BOOTH III

Private Robert Booth, one of the three South Wales Borderers who have been indicated for robbery and common assault on a taxi driver at Repulse Bay, failed to appear at the Criminal Sessions yesterday. It was stated that Booth would be unable to attend court for a fortnight owing to illness, and his Lordship, the Chief Justice, accordingly adjourned the case to the next Sessions. It will be recalled that the other two defendants pleaded guilty and were sentenced last week.

THEFT OF LEATHER

For the theft of a quantity of leather from a firm at No. 17 Lower Lascar Row, which is in bankruptcy, Li Sun was fined $50, or one month's hard labour, by Mr. Macfadyen at Central Magistrate's yesterday. Mr. H. J. Millington, Chief Bailiff of the Supreme Court, said he went to the premises on Friday with some prospective buyers and the leather was then intact. Lau Ka-cheung, a former fook of the shop, stated that at 1.30 a.m. on Saturday he saw the defendant emerge from the premises carrying the leather on his shoulders.

Interpreter stated that, when the male accused was charged with murder he replied: "I did not murder Chu Kwai. I don't know him." The woman in reply to the same charge stated "I don't know. I did not kill him."

Sergeant Estelle gave evidence relative to the finding of the body and the position of the temple as regards the stream.

His Lordship inquired from the witness whether he saw any indication of bloodstained feet in the temple of people who might have walked out. Witness replied in the negative.

In answer to a question by His Lordship before the Court rose, Mr. Fraser said that the Crown theory was that the murder was done by the second accused and it came to the knowledge of the first accused after it was committed.

The case will be continued to-day.

EUROPEAN FINED

Before Mr. Lee at Kowloon Magistrate's yesterday, H. H. Muller, of No. 2 Lock Road, was charged with (1) assaulting Mr. M. Wong, of the Kowloon Service Co., of Ashley Road, and (2) assaulting Chan Hoi, a police sergeant.

Inspector Stimson who prosecuted, said that at 7.30 p.m. on Saturday defendant went to the service garage in Ashley Road and wanted to take out a cycle belonging to his friends. Mr. Wong refused to let him take it, and as a result, a quarrel ensued. Mr. Wong alleged that defendant hit him on the throat. A Chinese sergeant came on the scene and attempted to separate the two men. It was alleged that defendant gave the sergeant a couple of blows and nearly knocked him out.

Defendant pleaded guilty to both charges and said he was sorry for what happened.

On the first charge, defendant was bound over in $50 for six months and on the second count he was fined $50.

IMPORTING SILVER INGOTS

A fine of $100 or, in default, two months' hard labour was imposed by Mr. W. M. Thomson at Central Magistrate's yesterday on Sze Wai-min, a seaman, for having imported 97 silver ingots on the ss. Huihang from Tangao without having placed them on the ship's manifest. It was stated that the ingots were found under defendant's bedding.

OBSTRUCTION AT FERRY WHARF

The defendants were arrested as the result of special instruction to clear the crowds obstructing the Yau-mai Ferry wharf, remarked Sub-Inspector Dudge before Mr. Macfadyen at Central Magistrate's yesterday when four street coolies were charged with gambling. The defendants were fined $1 or one day's gaol each, and 82 cents picked up was placed in the Poor Box.

On a charge of stealing clothing from the Sanitary Department coolies' quarters, Hospital Road, where he was formerly employed, Yeung Kam, 27, was fined $10 or, in default fourteen days' hard labour by Mr. Macfadyen at Central Magistrate's yesterday.

A TRAGIC WEEK TWENTY YEARS AGO

July 30, 1914.

At St. Petersburg.—The order for Russian mobilisation was posted in the night of July 30th-31st. At three in the afternoon, the German ambassador has an audience with the Tsar and pleads, "Let the Emperor Nicholas consent to annul the military measures taken, and the peace of the world is assured."

The Tsar and the Kaiser continue their telegraphic dialogue. At midnight, after reception of a cable from Bethmann, the German ambassador goes to Sazonov, and announces, "If in twelve hours Russia does not stop her mobilisation, then Germany will mobilise."

Sazonov replies, "We will not attack as long as discussions are in progress with Austria. We cannot demobilise without disorganising our army."

At Vienna.—The chief-of-staff who had thought he could localise the conflict, had to change his mind when he saw Russia mobilised. With the help of Berchtold, he extracts the mobilisation order from the Emperor Franz Joseph.

Differences of opinion immediately occurred between the Austrian and German general staffs.

With the mobilisation order in his pocket, Berchtold stated that he was ready to discuss matters with the powers.

At Berlin.—At 11.30 Bethmann receives a telegram from the ambassador announcing Russian mobilisation. Moltke went to the Imperial palace, and he recounts in his memories, that he found himself amongst people who had lost their heads.

Moltke found the Kaiser in company with Bethmann, who was trembling, the war minister Falkenhahn, and others. The Kaiser was against the general staff plan, because he thought that England would not enter into the war. Moltke insisted on the plan being carried out. He had in hand the mobilisation order signed by the Kaiser, and so he sneaks out of the room. As he is leaving in his car, an officer catches him up and tells him to return to the palace. Moltke orders his aide-de-camp to carry out the order of mobilisation. The Kaiser is more upset than ever. He has news from England and he wishes to cancel the mobilisation. Moltke refuses to obey the Kaiser's orders. Then the Kaiser on his own initiative orders the different headquarters to keep the German armies at least one hour from the French and Belgium frontiers. Late that evening the Kaiser is informed from England that he has misunderstood the position, and he sends for Moltke and tells him to do what he wants.

At London.—Grey notifies the ambassador in Paris that he does not know what decision parliament will make, and that therefore he can make no guarantee. He asks the French and German governments to state that they will respect Belgium neutrality. France replies, Yes Germany replies evasively, "that a statement would unfold the German plan of campaign."

DR. MORRISON'S CENTENARY

Governor To Attend Service

His Excellency the Governor, Sir William Peel, K.C.M.G., K.B.E., accompanied by his A.D.C. will attend the United Church service in connection with the Morrison Centenary observances, which is to be held at the Volunteer Headquarters parade ground at 6 p.m. next Sunday.

Addresses will be given by the Bishop and by the Rev. Wong Oi Tong, and there is to be a mass choir. The band of the South Wales Borderers will provide the hymn accompaniments.

A display of books used and produced by Dr. Morrison is now being held at the shop window of Messrs. Kelly & Walsh, Chater Road.

A small Memorial Service followed by the laying of a wreath on the grave, will take place at Macao at 3 p.m. to-morrow. The British Consul-General will attend. The steamer leaves Hongkong 8 a.m. leaves Macao 4 p.m.

The Exhibits

To mark the centenary of Dr. Morrison's death Kelly & Walsh are giving space to some interesting exhibits in their window. There is a portrait after Chinnery—an engraving of the great Missionary engaged in his study in the translation of the scriptures into Chinese; his chief life's task.

The most valuable book shown is a manuscript copy of portions of the New Testament in Chinese which Dr. Morrison made in 1805 while still in London. Above this book is a photograph of the British Museum book—"A Harmony of the Gospels" it is called though it is more than that, compiled in 1736 from Roman Catholic sources. It was from this book in the British Museum that Dr. Morrison made his transcript which is shown open at the same page as that shown in the photograph above it. The two volumes of the original printed copy of the dictionary he compiled are also exhibited.

The high value put upon these labours of Dr. Morrison is shown by the great expense which was incurred in publishing them. The dictionary was issued by the Honourable East India Company at a cost of £10,000 while the British and Foreign Bible Society spent £12,000 in printing his Chinese version of the Bible.

Another book shown in the window is Horae Sinicae, a small book which contains translations Dr. Morrison made from the Chinese Classics. It is interesting insofar as the portions selected for translation reflect his own judgment and special interest. He must, for example, have meditated long over the opening statement, made by Mencius—"Man is by nature good"—representing as it does a cardinal feature of Chinese philosophy in contrast with the Western thought which holds that man is born in sin and is the child of wrath.

Another exhibit which illustrates Morrison's love for good books is his splendid copy of the Bible which is in seven volumes. This is a magnificent example, combining as it does the finest art of the printer, book-binder and engraver of the period.

MR. WANG CHING WEI ON FINANCE

Taxation Relief And Foreign Loan Adjustment

(Special to "Hong Kong Daily Press.")

(By WANG CHING WEI)

July 1 was the ninth anniversary of the establishment of the National Government. It was also the day on which the most important part of the resolutions adopted by the Second National Finance Conference was carried into effect.

In the course of an address delivered at the memorial service held on March 12 at Central Party Headquarters in commemoration of the ninth anniversary of the death of the late Party Leader (Dr. Sun Yat Sen), I reported that the abolition of exorbitant levies and miscellaneous taxes would be first carried out in Kiangsi. At that time burdens of this character in that province amounted to $250,000 a month, the greater portion of which was employed for the promotion of education and the maintenance of local militia.

In view of the fact that Kiangsi is one of the most important provinces in the zone where bandit-suppression operations are being carried on, the Executive Yuan decided to instruct the Ministry of Finance to remit a monthly appropriation of $250,000 to the Kiangsi Provincial Government in order to enable the authorities there to abolish immediately the exorbitant levies and miscellaneous taxes then being collected. This decision was translated into action in March last, and at the time I declared that while abolition of exorbitant levies and miscellaneous taxes would be first carried out in Kiangsi, it would eventually—or rather in the shortest possible time—be carried out throughout the country. This view was also shared by Dr. H. H. Kung, Minister of Finance.

A Second National Finance Conference, was subsequently convened to devise ways and means for the solution of various financial problems concerning the Central and various local authorities, the most important of these being the reduction of the Farm Surtax and the abolition of exorbitant levies and miscellaneous taxes. These levies however, cannot be reduced or abolished merely by the simple process of the issuance of instructions from the Central authorities. In order that tax reduction or abolition may be effected by the various local authorities concerned, the Government must first devise measures whereby the loss of revenue resulting from such action may be made good.

Farm Surtax

The resolution adopted by the Finance Conference providing for the reduction of the Farm Surtax and for making good the resultant deficit has been already forwarded to the Executive Yuan by the Ministry of Finance, having been approved by the Yuan. The Government has further decided that from July 1 the entire revenue from Tobacco and Wine Licence Tax shall go to the various local authorities. Measures for the apportionment of the proceeds from the Stamp Tax have also been determined. Beginning from the new fiscal year, 10 per cent. of the proceeds will be remitted to the Province, 30 per cent. to the districts (Hsien), and 20 per cent. to the border provinces, in need of financial assistance.

In pursuance of a resolution adopted by the Finance Conference, the Ministry of Finance has also petitioned the Executive Yuan, recommending that the National Government be petitioned to issue a Mandate enjoining the

BIRTHDAY OF KWAN YIN

When Women "Chim Kwa"

"Yesterday was the birthday of the Buddhist goddess Kwan Yin. There is a book well-known to all China, the Sai Yau Kei, or Record of a Journey to the West. It is wrongly imagined by some western scholars that this book is a record of the journey of the monk who first went to India in the Tang dynasty in order to obtain the Buddhist works. There was such a monk, and there is a record. It is also true that the Sai Yau Kei mentions the voyage of this monk to a strange land; but the book is entirely mythical. It recounts how the monkey god called Sun, the monkey king, rescued Kwan Yin, and later she helped him in his adventures, when he was compelled to accompany the monk on his journey.

The Sai Yau Kei is a very profound book for Buddhists, although the manner of recounting the story as a fairy tale, has given it an appeal for old and young in China. Some ancient authorities do not admit that Kwan Yin is a female deity, but her favourite posture is as a female. There is a famous picture depicting her as a female, in a monastery on the island of Pu Tu, off the coast of Chekiang. Well might the first missionaries who arrived here a few centuries ago consider it curious that the Chinese worshipped a female deity, who reminded them of the origin Mary. The female character was introduced from India where every Buddhist deity represents a faculty of the soul and passions. In the books of the Old Testament, Wisdom is described as a woman. Here the hidden mystery has been materialised as a human being, and on her birthday thousands of Chinese women go to her temple in order to burn incense, and also to "chim kwa," that is to draw the sticks.

A woman by doing so may know if she is going to have a son, and doubtless the goddess will grant any other request.

NEW SLOOP

H.M.S. Leith, one of the four sloops authorized in 1931, but not begun until 1933, is expected to run her acceptance trial from Devonport Dockyard to-day. She is a sister ship to the Grimsby, Commander N. V. Grace, which in the course of her first cruise has just paid a visit to Grimsby and Cleethorpes. The Grimsby will shortly leave for the China Station, whereas the Leith has been allocated to New Zealand in place of the Veronica. Capt. Oliver Bevil, who was promoted 18 months ago, is in command of the Leith—his first command.

RAILWAY TAKINGS

Nanking, July 24.

Since the reduction of the freight rates on Wheat, the earnings of the Tientsin-Pukow Railway have increased. It is estimated that the receipts for this month will reach $1,800,000, which will be one-third more than in previous months.—Kuo Min.

YENPING FLOODED

Districts Like A Lake

Foochow, July 24.

Mountain torrents have converted all low-lying areas in Yenping, northern Fukien, into a veritable lake. Traffic in that city has been disrupted and all the rice-fields damaged. Owing to the typhoon raging along the China coast, all outgoing steamers plying along the Min River, were forced to return to Yenping for shelter.

Although the inland water service in southern Fukien was resumed yesterday, the flood situation in that part of the province has taken a turn for the worse. The Changchow-Anmy, and other highways are submerged in several feet of water.—Kuo Min.

COMMUNISTS IN KIANGSI

Attempt To Reach Fukien Coast

(From Our Special Correspondent)

Canton, July 30.
According to reliable reports, the Communist troops in Eastern Kiangsi have made a rush on Northern and Central Fukien with the object of reaching the sea.

At a conference last week at Juchin, Kiangsi, Generals Chu Teh and Miao Tse Tung, well-known Communist leaders, decided to break through the enemy lines and rush to the Fukien coast, as they believe that continued enveloping by the government troops will eventually spell ruin to the Red forces.

Instead of being closed in by Nanking troops, the high Communist command has sent four divisions to attack Tai Tien in Central Fukien. According to the reports, the Communists hope to capture Yen Ping and then open the way to Foochow. Yen Ping, which is a strategic gateway to Foochow, is garrisoned by the crack Nanking division under General Wei Lap Wong, German educated officer.

Although Nanking press reports claim that the government troops in Fukien have the situation well in hand, the attacking Communists are having sharp engagements along all fronts. General Chiang Ting Wen, Commander-in-Chief of Nanking detachments in Fukien, has arrived at Lung Yen, Southern Fukien to direct the left flank attack on the Communist position at Chang.

If General Wei Lap Wong can make a stand at Yen Ping, all will be well. Should Yen Ping fall, Foochow can be taken without fighting.

WATER SUPPLY IN CANTON

Street Fountains For The Poor

(From Our Special Correspondent)

Canton, July 30.

As more water is consumed during the summer months, the Canton City government has installed several street fountains in different parts of the city to provide free supply to those households which do not have supply from the water works.

The fountains will be located mostly in the slum districts where the people cannot afford to pay for the water bill and use well water for drinking and washing. The municipal government believes that well water is not so clean as that from the water works and expects the people in the slum districts to use the water from the fountains at least for drinking purposes.

For those who are obliged to use well water, the Municipal Bureau of Public Health is providing chlorine which is to disinfect the water in the wells by destroying the micro-organisms. Some people find the public fountains too far away and prefer to use well water right inside their houses.

The water works are notified that in case the pumps are stopped for purposes of repair, due notice should be made in the Press in order to give the consumers time to store up water during the period of suspension.

LITTLE WIND TO ASSIST

Shanghai Yachtsmen Foiled

Shanghai, July 25.

Of the six boats starting in yesterday's harbor race, only one completed the course within the prescribed time limit, and hence collected a long lead in points over the others in the miscellaneous class. It was a tedious struggle against the tide, with little wind to assist, and the Ingomar, sailed by R. Lock, was the only boat to complete the course inside the limit of 11 hours.

There was only a hint of wind when the boats went to the starting line, and the six drifted downriver close-hauled, making very little more than staterage way. Winsome had the windward berth, but Ingomar soon went ahead and was followed by Viking and Rover, with Mignon astern. It was necessary to make two tacks before the lower mark was reached and this Ingomar rounded, still followed in order by Viking, Rover, and Mignon. Winsome had drifted badly down on the tide and was left, but the other four had a struggle to clear the mark, which was taken to starboard.

Ingomar sought the slack water inshore, where the first of the flood was just making itself felt. Rover came up to windward and took the lead over Viking and Mignon, but the latter two blanketed her in turn and all three commenced to go astern. Viking and Mignon sought the Pootung side and lost much distance, due to the tide being stronger there, whereas Rover came over to the Shanghai side and managed to make the buoy prior to following Ingomar up-river. Winsome dropped back steadily, and eventually gave up the contest, her crew putting about and making down-river for a cruise.

After blowing from the east, the wind changed round and headed the boats on the return, blowing from southwest. Ingomar had the first of the stronger breeze, which freshened considerably, so that they all made good time on the beat back, but so much time had been lost in the earlier stages that Ingomar was the only one able to make the up-river mark in time to be reasonably safe in attempting the finish. She only just managed to cross the line in time, being 55 sec. inside the limit. Rover, lying second, and Viking, third, both gave up when informed they were definitely unable to complete the course in the prescribed time. The time for the Ingomar was 1 hr. 29 min. 4 sec.

DR. ROBERT MORRISON

His Voyage To China

To-morrow is the centenary of the death of Dr. Morrison at Canton. He was born in 1782 in Northumberland. His father was a shoemaker, who was doing fairly well in business. There were eight children, and the boy at an early age was sent to a school under his uncle. He is credited with having had a very good memory, and he caused a deep impression on those round him by learning off by heart the 119th Psalm, the longest of all.

At the age of 14 he left school to work in his father's shop, and although the hours were long he found time to pursue his studies. At the age of 19 he wished to enter the church, and he started to learn Latin, Greek and Hebrew. His desire was to go to some country abroad and to become a missionary. The London Missionary Society became interested, and in 1804 they commenced to train him up for China. At that time it was forbidden for Chinese to teach the language to foreigners, and only those were allowed to reside in Macao and Canton who went there for business. Morrison was lucky in finding a Cantonese gentleman in London, Yeung Shin Tat, and with his help as well as that of a document found in the British Museum, being the translation of parts of the Scriptures, he prepared himself for his labours. From this document which was made in 1738 by someone unknown, he prepared a Chinese Latin lexicon.

In 1807, at the age of 25 he was ready to leave England. He could not obtain a passport in one of the East India Company's ships, because they would not carry missionaries. Therefore he went to America and from thence to Canton. He was ordained on January 8th, 1807. On January 31st he left for New York, arriving after three months. When he was obtaining his passage in that city he met the Captain, who while admiring his keenness, laughed at his efforts. "Do you think that you have the strength to alter the idolatry and customs of that great country?" Morrison replied, "I cannot do it, but I look up to God to do it."

Canton was reached on September 8th. Morrison received considerable help from the American Consul at that place. In fact he was looked upon as being an American rather than a Britisher.

Worked In Godown

When at Macao, Morrison was lucky in meeting Staunton, the head of the East India Company in the Far East, who was a Chinese scholar. They became firm friends, and when trouble ensued because Morrison was not there for the purpose of doing business, Staunton offered him the position of translator to the company, at £500 per annum. This was in 1809, after he had spent nearly two years working in the cellar of an American god-down in Canton. The position offered him by the East India Company coincided with his marriage to the daughter of an American merchant in Macao. His work of translation of the Bible, and also the compilation of his dictionary, could now proceed more easily. There was some opposition from the Roman Catholic missionaries, but the translation of the New Testament was completed by 1814.

In 1815, the East India Company held a meeting to decide what was to be done with Morrison because the spreading of the gospels was liable to be harmful to their interests. They wrote to Morrison that the Board had heard that he had published a Chinese edition of the Bible and also Scripture Lessons, which was rousing the opposition of the Chinese. There was an Imperial order against the book and the Company considered that it might have a bad effect on their business. The board therefore dismissed Morrison, but knowing of all his efforts and that they had received much help from him, they would give him £4,000. At the same time he was asked to stay on the job for the time being.

The workmen were persecuted, and Staunton decided to take Morrison with him on his expedition north, when he attempted to see the Emperor. They were unsuccessful because Staunton refused to kneel before the Emperor.

The dictionary was finished in 1823, and apart from a voyage to England, Morrison spent the remainder of his life producing the Bible. He died at Canton on August 1st, 1834, leaving a son who later became teacher to Sir Harry Parkes.

NEW RULE OF COURTS

Judge Helmick Promises Procedure Change

Shanghai, July 25.

News of paramount importance to creditors who have recovered judgments in the U.S. Court became known yesterday in the course of the case of L. E. Hudec v. Grant Mark and the China Finance Corporation, when the court indicated that a new rule of court is under contemplation where, by a supplementary proceedings would be set up so that judgment debtors can be cited into court for an examination as to their assets, transfers of property and the like. The rule, however, has not yet been formulated.

Judge Milton J. Helmick granted the plaintiff in the case the right of extreme amendment to set up an entirely different cause of action in the form of a Creditor's Bill. The necessity for amendment and change of the nature of the action arose from the circumstance that the plaintiff was unable to sue out a Writ of Garnishment against the China Finance Corporation to attach monies allegedly due from it to the defendant, Mr. Mark, because there was no judge of the U.S. Court at the time and no writs could be issued. Consequently the plaintiff filed a complaint asking an injunction to restrain the China Finance Corporation from paying over money to Mr. Mark. No injunction could be issued in the absence of a judge and apart from service of the complaint, nothing further was done. The money, it is said by plaintiff's counsel, Mr. N. F. Allman, has been paid over. Since an injunction would now be fruitless, the plaintiff desired to proceed with the case on the theory of a creditor's proceeding. The court permitted this but held the complaint would have to be amended to set up the proper allegations for the purpose.

Grand Theatre Involved

The plaintiff is now seeking to recover $19,849.02 for services rendered by him as architect for the Grand Theatre from August, 1931, to June, 1933, and for which he was granted judgement against Mr. Mark on February 20, 1934. Mr. Mark was doing business under the firm name of the Greater Theatre Syndicate at the time the obligation was incurred.

Something of his financial difficulties were aired when Mr. Allman alleged in court that the defendant had become involved in difficulties with his employers, the China Finance Corporation, which terminated its agreement with him. Mr. Mark's claim was settled said Mr. Allman, for the sum of $50,000 which was paid to Mr. Mark by a cheque made out to Mrs. M. L. Mark, mother of the defendant, and according to Mr. Allman, a British subject outside the jurisdiction of the U.S. Court.

He further alleged that the China Finance Company "colluded with the defendant in making the cheque," declaring that the payment was made after the service of the writ of execution upon the company, and two notifications in writing of the judgement, and Kobe is now confronted with the difficult problem of how to dispose of about 16,000 immigrants left behind out of 27,800—the estimated number of immigrants this year—when the anti-Japanese immigration law in Brazil comes into force very soon. Despite the efforts made in various quarters, the enforcement of the law is near at hand, and the Immigrants' Home in Kobe, and the Osaka Shosen Kaisha and others now have a rather difficult question to solve.

the writ, warning against payment of any money without payment to the Marshall of the U.S. Court. The writ was, however, returned unpaid.

Mr. C. S. Franklin, counsel for the defendant, argued that the proceeding under which yesterday's action was brought was a Supplementary Proceeding, and that Mr. Mark could not be examined under it. Mr. Allman, contending that the action was brought on a Creditor's Bill, asked leave to file an amendment to the claim. It was at this point that the court indicated the consideration of the new rule of court which attorneys conceded yesterday, would assist in the matter of executing judgments were it effected in this jurisdiction. Hereof, the latter were of small import, actually, unless the debtor's assets and their location was known.

"CABINET OF COMPROMISE"Peace Brought To Vienna*ITALIAN PRESS ATTACK ON GERMANY*Hapsburg Monarchy Issue Arises Again

The revolt in Austria has now been crushed. A fresh crisis has been averted and temporary relief brought to Vienna by the formation of the new Cabinet which was decided after long deliberation.

A violent campaign is being waged against Germany by the Italian Press. Meanwhile there is some speculation as to the restoration of the Hapsburg monarchy.

(Special to "Hong Kong Daily Press")

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received, July 30, 4:30 p.m.)

Vienna, July 30.

At two o'clock on Monday morning President Miklas appointed Dr. Kurt Schuschnigg as Chancellor and confirmed the following appointments: Starhemberg, Vice-Chancellor, who is simultaneously entrusted with all affairs relating to security; Foreign Minister, Egon Berger-Waldenegg; Major Fey taking charge of Home Affairs in addition to the post he held under Dollfuss. Karl Buresch has been appointed Minister for Finance, Fritz Stockinger, Minister for Trade and Communications; Otto Neustaedter-Stuerner, Minister for Social Administration, who is simultaneously entrusted with all affairs relating to co-operative adjustment.

The new Chancellor who is only thirty six years old, is also taking charge of the Ministries of Justice, Education, and War. General Zehner, Dr. Hans Pernster and Herr Karl Karwinski had been appointed Under-Secretary of State for War, Education and Justice respectively. The appointment of Dr. Schuschnigg in succession to Dollfuss was predicted by "Transocean" a few days ago.

While the Cabinet was presided over by President Miklas and held its session, the official residences were strongly guarded as rumours of a new intended Heimwehr putsch created an atmosphere of intense uneasiness. The influence of the Fascist Heimwehr has been considerably enhanced in the new cabinet.

In this connection the appointment of a new Foreign Minister, Berger Waldenegg, is considered noteworthy. He is a prominent member of the Heimwehr. The scope of both Starhemberg's and Fey's offices have been considerably widened. The new Chancellor belongs to the Christian-Socialist party.—Transocean Kuo Min.

"CABINET OF COMPROMISE"

Vienna, July 30.

The formation of the new "Cabinet of Compromise" has averted a fresh crisis and brought temporary peace to Vienna. While the appointment of Dr. Schuschnigg is an undoubted success for the Catholics, it is counterbalanced by the fact that four of the most important posts are held by the Heimwehr whose resignation of the Chancellorship in favour of Dr. Schuschnigg is not considered permanent.

The inclusion of Major Fey in the cabinet provided a big surprise as Christian Social circles made no secret of their personal aversion to Fey, whose appointment to a major office is due to a strong determination of the Heimwehr to defend his rights.

Dr. Schuschnigg is appointed as Chancellor, Prince von Starhemberg as Vice-Chancellor, and Major Fey as Minister of the Interior. Other Cabinet appointments are Dr. Buresch as Minister of Finance, while Dr. Schuschnigg will be in addition Minister of Defence and Education. Prince von Starhemberg will be in addition Minister of Security, giving him responsibility for the gendarmery and auxiliary forces.

The constitution of the Cabinet was only agreed upon after eight hours of spirited conference, and though the Christian Socialist Party has gained an outward success by Dr. Schuschnigg's appointment, the fact that the Vice Chancellorship and the Security, Interior and Foreign Ministries are held by the Heimwehr means that victory is really theirs.

Dr. Schuschnigg is a church adherent and moderate, and is less hated in Opposition circles.—Reuter

ITALIAN PRESS CAMPAIGN

Rome, July 30.

A violent Press campaign is being whipped up against Germany which is declared to be responsible for the murder of Dr. Dollfuss and plotting to overthrow the Austrian Government. The newspapers denounce Germany as a nation of barbarians, while it is stated that six weeks after Signor Mussolini and Chancellor Hitler met in Venice to lay the foundation of a "minimum common agreement in Europe" two Fascist nations are now glaring angrily at each other across the prostrate form of Austria.

HAPSBURG MONARCHY

Meanwhile interest is aroused by reports that Prince Otto is watching from his castle in Belgium to see whether he will be called back to the Hapsburg throne. Prince Otto is a strong Catholic and anti-Nazi and strongly favoured by the Vatican.

Some months ago Signor Mussolini would have welcomed the restoration of Prince Otto. Since he publicly claimed back for Austria the South Tyrol which Austria lost to Italy under the peace treaties, Signor Mussolini declared that Prince Otto will receive his throne.

It is believed that the Yugoslavs prefer to see Austria thrown into the arms of the Nazis, while the Czechoslovaks are also opposed to the Hapsburgs.—Reuter

ITALIAN FEARS

Rome, July 30.

The appointment of von Papen is regarded with apprehension and suspicion in Italy. It is believed that if the Austrian Government refuses to approve the appointment, public opinion will welcome the move. It is doubtful whether the Italian Government will lay itself open to the charge of interfering in Austrian internal affairs when the Italian case is based on the charge that Germany is doing so.

Signor Mussolini, in defending Austria's independence, aims at security. The support of Britain and France is also likely. An understanding will be reached with Czechoslovakia in order to meet future eventualities in Austria.—Reuter

INSURRECTION CRUSHED

Vienna, July 29.

Apart from minor skirmishes in the vicinity of Salzburg, the Nazi insurrection has been crushed throughout Austria.

Salzburg itself is peaceful, and the first performance of the special musical festival in memory of Dr. Dollfuss passed quietly.

Meanwhile, the Austro-German frontier has again been completely closed following reports of fighting between the German Reichswehr and the Austrian Legionnaire, near Kufstein, on the Bavarian side of the frontier.

Vienna is in a state of excitement owing to fears of a new putsch by the Heimwehr. Strong forces are guarding the public buildings.—Reuter

(By Telegraph, Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received, July 30, 4:30 p.m.)

Belgrade, July 30.

The massing of Italian troops on the Austrian border has evoked considerable uneasiness according to the Yugoslavian newspaper "Politika". In discussing the Italian policy vis-a-vis Germany, the Journal declared that although the Rome papers continue to denounce National-Socialist Germany as the only culprit, they forget to what extent how Italy for the past one and half years strove to force upon Vienna various and not altogether wisest counsel.—Transocean Kuo Min.

No exact casualty figures of the insurrectionists are available but it is believed they far surpass the losses of the executive.—Transocean Kuo Min.

PHYRN PASS FIGHTING

(Special to "Hong Kong Daily Press") (Copyright, 1934)

Vienna, July 29.

In a remarkable military report on the battles around Phyrn Pass and Ennstal, a tribute was paid to the beaten foe in striking contrast to the reports from the civil authorities who referred to the insurrectionists as "murder gangs" and "contemptible rebels."

The military report closes thus: "The rebels during the fighting around Phyrn Pass had sustained serious losses. Five dead had been brought in but the losses of armed forces were also considerable. One of the bravest officers in the world war, Major Charvat of the Alpine Rifle Regiment No. 8, the only officer of the former Austrian army who was twice decorated with medals for bravery, died in the field of honour. Order has been restored in these districts."—Transocean Kuo Min.

BUSINESS IN NEW YORKLondon Opinion

London, July 30.

The General opinion here of New York seems to be that the American administration which has now finished a policy of business reform will shortly encourage enterprise giving greater freedom in the conduct of business by businessmen. It is pointed out that the beneficial effect of the reforms has been quick recovery in Wall Street from the depression caused by the Austrian crisis which is attributed by the fact that under the new regime heavy short-selling is practically out of the question.

Major L.L.B. Angus, well-known stock market statistician, is of the opinion that President Roosevelt's reflationary programme is only just beginning to operate in earnest and although the technique is somewhat different it will produce similar conditions to those which in the past two years stimulated trade revival in Great Britain.

On the other hand American business is still in the doldrums. Although exports for the half year amounted to $1,038,000,000 and imports $863,000,000 as compared with $669,000,000 and $593,000,000 respectively last year, the devaluation of the dollar largely offsets these gains. Moreover, the effects of the drought are already being felt by the retail trade and is expected to have a serious repercussion and alter American purchasing power.—Reuter

ANTI-JAPANESE QUOTA IN CEYLONReason For Enforced Imposition

London, July 30.

The Secretary of State for the Colonies, Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister, replying to a question by the Conservative Member for Accrington, Major H. A. Proctor in the House of Commons to-day, said that the Governor of Ceylon reported to the Board of Ministers not to propose or introduce legislation for regulation of imports of foreign cotton and artificial piece goods, which policy has been generally adopted by the Colonies which are free to take such action.

The Government feel that it will be impossible that Ceylon should be excluded from a particular Imperial policy which is regarded as essential in the economic interests of the Empire as a whole. They therefore decided to make use of powers of legislation by an Order-in-Council establishing the Ceylon Constitution. Accordingly an Order-in-Council will be made investing the Governor of Ceylon with power to regulate textile imports by quota in the same way as such imports are being regulated in other parts of the Colonial Empire.—Reuter

MASS MEETING PROTEST

At a mass meeting of Ceylon labour, interests a resolution was passed protesting against "penalising Ceylonese workers for the benefit of Lancashire by forcing a Japanese quota on the Colony." HOSTELS FOR WORKERSRelief To Street Sleepers

(From Our Special Correspondent)

Canton, July 30.

In planning to construct public hostels for the working classes in Canton, the Municipal Bureau of Social Affairs has made a census of workers in Canton and found that the total number is about 39,000, according to a report made this morning at the weekly memorial service at the municipal government by Mr. Chang Yueng Fung, head of the Social Affairs Bureau.

Mr. Chang said that General Chan Tsal Tong, Commander-in-Chief of the First Group Army, was much moved at seeing the number of people sleeping on the pavement and wishes immediate relief to these homeless workers. In his estimate, Mr. Chang said that 24,000 are factory workers, 12,500 rickshaw coolies, 1,000 longshoremen, and 2,000 ordinary coolies.

These figures do not include those in the Municipal Poor House whose inmates have increased from 2,000 to 4,400 in recent months. Over 100 beggars were recently admitted to this Poor House, he said, while over 40 beggars from Kiangsi, Kiangsu and Chekiang were sent back to their respective native districts so as to avoid a public charge on the municipal authorities.

Inmates of the Poor House are taught agriculture, Mr. Chang continued. Recently the First Group Army has contributed $1,000 for the purchase of seeds so that the people in the Poor House may have more opportunity to learn the art of plantation.

During May and June, the Bureau of Social Affairs has granted free medical services to the poor through the three health stations. The first station served 4,000 persons, the second station 2,500 persons and the third station 3,000 persons. Mr. Chang said that each applicant has to get a ticket, and this sometimes created a dispute among these who seek free medical aid.

To prevent sufferings to the poor in the event of return of the heat wave, 120 free tea stands and many public matched shades are provided for the poor and wayfarers.

AIR LINE TO HONG KONGHome Government Negotiations

London, July 30.

Sir Philip Sassoon, Under-Secretary for Air, informed Mr. W. LONDON AIR-MAIL LETTER

The Letters Of The Great: German Visitors: A Royal Reunion: High Bailiff Presides: The Right To Appeal: "Lady Precious Stream:" Dalcroze's Pupils: A Test Of "Conns"

London, July 15.
Among the many interesting coming sales which the revival of confidence is producing is one at Sotheby's at the end of the month, which includes a remarkable collection of Nelson letters,
the property of the Duke of Bronte, many letters by Fanny Journey, sold by a descendant of Dr. Barnum, and a varied collection of letters written to the late Sir James Knowles the editor of the "Nineteenth Century." One letter of Ruskin's to Knowles is a curious example of the smallness of the great. "How is it, I ask again," writes Ruskin, "that nobody but you ever notices a word
I say? And why is Huxley always called 'professor'—and Robertson
'professor'—but I always 'Mr.'?"
The Nelson relics include his autograph codicil to his will bequeathing £4,000 to Miss Horatia Nelson Thompson, in which he makes Lady Hamilton sole guardian of the said Horatia, "knowing that she will educate my adopted child in the paths of religion and virtue and give her such accomplishments which so much adorn her self." He wished Horatia to marry his nephew Horatio Nelson.
In one of Nelson's letters from the Agamemnon in 1795 he tells how he had been 112 times in action
since the arrival in the Mediterranean and twice wounded, although not dangerously. A great curiosity is the manuscript of Cole-ridge's "The Dark Lady." Next week Sotheby's will sell the Northcote portrait miniatures, which include Isabella's portraits of Napoleon and of the Duke of Wellington.
"The Somerville Shakespeare," by Nicholas Hilliard, and many other notable miniatures.

GERMAN OFFICERS VISIT THE ADMIRALTY

The first ceremonial visit of German naval officers to the Admiralty since the Great War took place yesterday. Admiral Kolbe and the captains of the cruisers Leipzig and Königsberg, which are visiting Portsmouth, called on the First Lord of the Admiralty, Sir
Boltin Eyre Mansell.

The officers were afterwards entertained to lunch at the German Embassy and spent the afternoon sightseeing. Last night there was a reception at the Embassy, and they will return to Portsmouth today.

THE COSTERS' FAIR

The rain spared the costers' fair
in Kensington Palace field to-day,
and there was a royal reunion
when all the pearly kings and queens shook hands with Princess Louise Duchess of Argyll. It is a pity that the coster side of the fair is reinforced by so many irrelevant sideshows, but decorated carts made a brave show and entranced the crowd which lined the railings. It was pleasant to see on the forelegs of one donkey these feminine garments which in the good old vulgar days used to signalise a successful Derby.

We saw "London hawkers through the ages in dance, and mime," presented by the Mayfair School of Dancing, and a variety of other entertainments, ranging down to a "comic class
for dogs having unusual peculiarities."
The crowd were greatly pleased by a show of performing dogs, but there were some genuine coster shows to leaven the lamp-competitions for donkeys and ponies and contests in coster songs and dances. And at any rate one person—the little girl of nine who was told by the Duchess that her ostrich-feather hat was lovely—went away completely happy.

MANX JUSTICE

The criminal procedure in the Manx Courts, such as the one in which Mr. Kaye Don is being tried to-day is not as involved as the layman supposes.

The police courts are presided over by a high bailiff. Men committed on an indictable offence are sent to what is known as the "General Gaol Delivery." Its counterpart in England is the Assize court.

General Gaol Delivery is presided over by one of the Deemsters. In Manx law he has a similar status to an English
judge of the Assize (High) Court.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The Deemster sits with 12 jurymen (all men). The procedure is identical with the Assize Courts of England.

THE SUPREME K.C.

A convicted person has the right of appeal.

The Appeal Court consists of two Deemsters and an English K.C.
The English K.C. is introduced to give an atmosphere of strict impartiality and to counteract any possibility of insular prejudices.

The English K.C., in fact, ad-judicates solely. Although he sits with the two Deemsters they merely guide him on questions of Manx law.

VALET TO STAGE HEROES

An interesting Chinese visitor to London is Mr. S. I. Hsiung. He has translated works by Shaw, Hardy and Barrie into Chinese.
Having given our drama to the Chinese, Mr. Hsiung is now returning the compliment.

His preface to "Lady Precious Stream," a famous Chinese play of which Messrs. Methuen publish his translation to-day, deals with the functions of the stage-hand, who is a much more prominent person in the Chinese theatre than in ours.

He remains throughout the play in full view of the audience, and his duties include providing the actors with cups of tea after a long speech, breaking the hero's fall when he dies, and smoothing with loving hands the long red beard and sixfoot feathers which distinguish the inevitable bandit chief.

You need not, as a matter of fact, go as far as China to see the property man at work.

I once took part in an amateur performance in a little Yorkshire market town.

There were gas, footlights and headlights in the fit-up theatre.

TENNIS IN SHANGHAI

An Interesting Programme

Shanghai, July 25.
The Shanghai Lawn Tennis Association reminds players that entries for the men's singles ("A"
and "B" Classes), and men's doubles championships, and the international doubles (Roper Cup) close on August 5 at 4.30 p.m. and must be sent to the Hon. Secretary,
c/o Finance Department, S.M.C., as early as possible. It is anticipated that the men's "B" Class singles will be even more popular than last year. The men's doubles and the international doubles (Roper Cup) should produce some very interesting tennis, more particularly as the latter event carries with it a much coveted trophy. China and Great Britain, represented by Gordon Lum and Khoo Hoo-hye (or Guy Cheng)
and W. H. Duff and M. Benavitch, respectively, should meet in the final.

Mr. Ohta and eight other Japanese players will arrive on Thursday, August 9, and are to play local experts on the Association court on Saturday and Sunday, August 11 and 12. The programme will be announced later.
Among the leading players accompanying Mr. Ohta (an ex-Japanese Davis Cup player) are T. Watanabe
(Waseda University), S. Kodera (Dairen-Commercial College), H.
Tsutsu (Yamaguchi Higher Commercial College), etc.

Arrangements are being made to send an Interport team to Tientsin and in all probability the following players will represent Shanghai: M. Benavitch, L. D. Carson, Gordon Lum, and Guy Cheng.
They are due to sail on Sunday,
July 29, by the Kailan Mining Administration steamer. Japanese judges, through the courtesy of the aforementioned concern, who have put two tables at the disposal of the Association. The team should arrive in Tientsin about August 1
and will return by the steamer
Kailan of the same line.

The dramatic effect of the play depended entirely on the sudden lowering and then the swift raising again of the lights.

It went splendidly at the afternoon rehearsal, but in the evening, alas! the lights went out altogether.

Whereupon the handyman walked solemnly across the front of the stage with a taper on the end of a long pole and relit the lights.

The climax of the play somehow missed the maximum dramatic effect.

INVENTOR OF EURYTHMICS

Sir Hugh Allen and Sir Henry Hadow, eminent musicians both,
are to join in welcoming M. Jacques-Dalcroze to-morrow.

The occasion is a lunch to celebrate the opening of the new buildings of the London School of Eurythmics.

Both the word and the art it
denotes are M. Dalcroze's invention. Many years ago he conceived the idea of expressing rhythm
through movements of the body.

M. Dalcroze's pupils are equally skilled as musicians and dancers.

A certain rotundity of figure has
for many years prevented the master himself from exemplifying in his own person this union of the arts.

CONN CONTESTS

I was floored by a friend who asked me yesterday what a "conn contest" was. He explained that it was short for "connaisseurs"
contest—the latest post-Prohibition fad in America.

Apparently, a "conn contest" is a winetasting party. Any guest who can tell the difference between say, a sweet hook and dry champagne is a "conn."

Unlike champagne, which costs over £2 a bottle, Spanish and Portuguese wines are about the same price as in this country, and,
in consequence, are very popular.

GOLF CHAMPIONS IN MONEY MATCH?

U.S. Offer To Cotton

(Special Air Mail Service)

London July 11.
I am informed by Henry Cotton, who is returning to Brussels today, that he has received a cable from America proposing a 72 holes challenge match between Glen Duffy, the new U.S. open champion, and himself for a four-
dent.

If the match materialises it will most likely be played in California
during the winter.

Duffy is attached to the Brentwood Club, Los Angeles. Aged 33, he is the biggest player who ever held the American title, standing 6ft 1in and weighing over fifteen stone.

Cotton may make a tour of the States next year, and compete in the Open championship, which no
British player has won since Ray's

NEW YORK STOCK AND COMMODITY QUOTATIONS

AMERICAN ORIENTAL FINANCE CORPORATION AND S. E. LEVY & CO.

New York, July 28.
The American Oriental Finance Corporation's report through their New York agents, Messrs. E. A. Pierce & Co., states:—
Stocks:—The market is steady enough and chances favour an extension of the rally during the forthcoming week.
Wheat:—Prices are strong. Bullish influences were: unfavourable Canadian crop advice, little precipitation, the strength of the corn market and good-class buying. The weekly forecast of fair weather and rising temperatures influenced the corn market also.
Cotton:—Despite higher Liverpool advice, prices were lower on showers over Texas. The Trade absorbed light offerings, however, while there was also some speculative buying. Indications of drought relief in the West have largely been discounted. The weather forecast indicates clearing conditions over the Western belt.
New York, July 28.
Messrs. S. E. Levy & Company's report through their New York agents, Messrs. White, Weld & Co., states:—
Stocks:—We continue to feel that at the present level the

CONDITIONS IN SHANTUNG

Modern Train Travel In China

Shanghai, July 25.

The unsurpassed heat wave that has held south Shantung for a week or more has been broken by a wind storm and a small shower. The rains have been sufficient and crops are good. The bandit situation is also better. A few were recently beheaded but on the whole conditions improve.

A few weeks ago a few bandits entered the leper asylum here—bound the gatekeeper and helped themselves to what money was on hand and new clothes. One of the party, not being treated properly in the dividing of the spoils, told on the band and five of them were arrested and imprisoned. Up to the present eight have been taken and the soldiers are still on the trail.

The Chinese are excessively afraid of contracting leprosy so the community were surprised that fear did not prevent this robbery, especially when they must have known that money could not be in any large amount. Eggs from the lepers' neighbours' yards are not bought by Tientsin residents—they are sent to distant parts.

Nanking Ferry Crossing

The crossing of the ferry at Nanking consumes what appears to the traveller an unnecessary amount of time but is accomplished with no hurry or discomfort. The train is separated into three divisions but all taken across at the same time. To an "old timer" in China who travelled for years by slow boat and wheelbarrow, to ride by train across the Grand Canal, and across the Yangtze by train on a steam ferry, makes him wonder "can these things be?" Truly China has changed.

The numbers who ride on the Peking-Shanghai express are astonishing. A gentleman in Peking tried for four days to get a first class passage and failed. But at present, because of the crowds, three people travelling second class are not allowed to occupy a cabin which has four berths—this means a family of three, both men and women. Husbands and wives must separate. This is a good rule and the only way to prevent strange men from being put in the cabins with women.

First class passengers, of course, have no trouble over this arrangement but in these days of depression many first class people travel second or even third. We recently heard of a lady who had travelled third class and, on being asked why, naively replied "Because there was no fourth!" But it said to the credit of the Chinese people that, on the third class coach, are found many real ladies and gentlemen and one can travel with them and receive no offence.

The Reason Why

The crack batsman of the village team had made a very short stay at the wicket and retired with an ignominious duck.

"Ah!" said the curate who captained the eleven, "you didn't do so well as last week, Sam."

"No," agreed Sam, as he threw his bat down, "but last week I stayed in and made ninety, and then came out to find you fellows had drunk all the beer."

SHANGHAI MARKET COMMENT

Business on the Shanghai Stock Exchange was very dull last Wednesday, with the exception of the rubber group, which was quite active. Following better advices from the commodity markets of London, Singapore and New York, the local rubber market exhibited signs of revival on the next day when rates firmed up. Activity continued on Friday—prices were generally well maintained, and demand kept pace with offerings.

The General market remained dull. International Investment Trusts were offered at 11 without attracting buyers. The best bid for Shanghai Lands was 25.25.

During Saturday's half day session, the leading rubber shares declined while Lands, Utilities and Industrials attracted small attention. After a long period of idleness, Chinese Engineering and Mining changed hands at 14.25. Owing to the squaring of accounts for the July Settlement, the major part of business in the Shanghai Stock Exchange was in the rubber section. The August rates were rather steady with good all around inquiry. On the general market some business was done in Shanghai Waterworks, Explorations and International Assurance.

The Chinese Government bond market has been weakening during the week ended July 21st. The explanation of this fact would be found in the volume of long positions taken during the last strongly rally when the volume far outbalanced that of the short positions. With the gradual approach of Settlement Day, long traders got into a disadvantageous situation and their selling to set off, as they were unable to take delivery, brought about a continuous recession movement. The losses sustained, during the first day of the period under review, were quite heavy. As the result of two days of heavy losses, reaction set in when the greater part of the losses were uncanceled. The last three days of the week found the market steadily declining, pointing to a none too strong market. Despite the record prices recently, the present level is not considered as secure in view of the uncertainties of the political situation.

"A BRIGHTER FUTURE"

Prince's Message To A Shipping Festival

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, July 11.

The Prince of Wales, Master of the Merchant Navy and Fishing Fleets, has sent the following message on the occasion of the Shipping Festival to be held at Winchester Cathedral on Thursday:—

As Master of the Merchant Navy and as a Freeman of Winchester, I am glad to be able to send once more, a welcome to all those who will attend the Shipping Festival Service in Winchester Cathedral. This year pilgrims to the Cathedral will be present, as well as those who are associated with the many maritime interests embraced in the Sea of Winchester.

We have been passing through difficult times, but I believe that a brighter future lies ahead, and I hope that to all those who are present in the Cathedral on Thursday evening the Festival Service will be a source of comfort and fresh courage.

On the Safe Side

A kind old gentleman, seeing a small boy who was carrying a lot of newspapers under his arm, said: "Don't all those papers make you tired, my boy?" "Now, I don't read 'em" replied the lad.
